Issue No. 20

ON THE GREEN FRONT

THERE are four main premises upon which the National Front's ideology is based. The first three are Social Justice, Racial Purity and National Sovereignty. The fourth is the deep-rooted belief that man must again learn to live in harmony with the forces of nature instead of waging constant war against them. This particular facet of our world-view is even more relevant today, at a time when industrial capitalism is poisoning the earth in the name of 'progress'.

In order to highlight the National Front's views regarding ecology, we have included a centre-page spread in this issue which deals specifically with our attitudes towards the environment. On page ten there is a full page article on the disastrous effects of acid rain on the wildlife of Britain and Europe, while on page eleven there are shorter articles on various other aspects of the ecology debate.

From now on, Nationalism Today will put more emphasis on environmental issues, especially since, as Nationalists, we have an idealistic and moral duty to protect our heritage. We draw our strength from the spirit of our forefathers and it can hardly be denied that our forefathers felt a far more healthy affinity with the forces of nature than do the mindless sheep who inhabit our modern-day cities.

Modern man has been uprooted from the soil and placed in an artificial concrete world where he has become little more than a wage slave. He is no longer even able to feed or clothe himself, relying totally on the charity of the System before he can obtain these basic necessities of life. He has to work in the System's factories and the System's offices in order to be awarded the wage, paid with the System's paper money, which enables him to buy the things he needs from the System's shops.

The overall result of this mass exodus from the land has been disastrous. The British people have forsaken the old way of life which was simple, but which conferred upon them happiness, fulfillment and, above all, freedom. In return they have adopted a way of life which is totally divorced from nature; a way of life in which the new gods are the latest car, the latest video machine and the latest computer game.

But what is even more alarming are the long-term implications of this urbanised System. The artificial world man has created for himself is in the process of arrogantly pushing nature to one side. The System is discarding mother earth as though she is of no consequence.

This war which man is now waging against nature is not only foolhardy, it is downright dangerous. We can't go on polluting the atmosphere, we can't go on poisoning the sea, we can't go on slaughtering our wildlife forever. Sooner or later, future generations will have to pay for the folly of ignoring nature. Are we going to bequeath to future generations of our Race a world which is drained of wildlife and poisoned with chemicals?

Man lives in far closer unity with nature than he realises. Our mother earth has been ruthlessly exploited and poisoned for far too long, and no organism can live forever without nourishment. It is up to us to build a Britain in which our people will once again live in harmony with nature. It is up to us to destroy the capitalist System which is not only enslaving the people but is also destroying the land they live on. Finally, it is up to us to build up a Britain where the people are united by the eternal bonds of blood and soil.

'They are natural Tories' Call for Asian recruits

CONSERVATIVES must renew their efforts to recruit Asians into Party ranks, says one of the leading experts in the field.

The important role of Asians in the community over the last decade has increased immeasurably, particularly in the field of commerce and finance.

It has been said that they are "natural Tories" and their input into the nation's political activities from local councils to national affairs is becoming considerable.

THESE cuttings were taken from the January, 1984 issue of Conservative Newline. No further comment is necessary . . .

Brave Tory

BRAVE Tory convert Ambrozie Neil (right) has weathered a storm of personal abuse to deliver Brent Council to Conservative control.

The courageous councillor decided to switch from Labour after becoming convinced that the Tories were better for black people.

BRIXTON GOES TO BELFAST Scapegoat

Black community leaders on the streets of Belfast.

FIVE representatives of Black groups in Brixton travelled to Belfast at the invitation of Sinn Fein chairman Joe Austin.

Austin extended the invitation when he was over in London last year with IRA leader Gerry Adams. He met the Black community activists in Brixton and invited members of the Brixton Defence Campaign, the Brixton

Black Women's Group and the Black Unity and Freedom Party to travel to Ulster as the guests of the IRA.

One of the Blacks, Cecil Gutzmore, made a speech in West Belfast during which he and the other Blacks boasted of their support for the IRA's murder campaign.

A WHITE security guard has been sacked for doing his job. Peter Martin was booted out after a row with the Black Marxist, deputy leader of Brent Council, Merle Amory.

They clashed after an Indian man rushed into the Town Hall at 11 p.m refusing to stop for security. Mr Martin chased him to the councillors lounge - where Amory told him to leave the Asian alone.

Mr Martin insists he was only carrying out the duties he is paid for, by Brent Council. He said "I have been made a scapegoat of their own racism".

A TALE OF TWO LOYALISTS

GEORGE SEAWRIGHT has become the victim of a vicious media smear campaign following the publication of Nationalism Today's interview with him.

NT published the interview with Mr. Seawright under the heading of 'An Ulster Loyalist Speaks Out' in issue 18. Mr. Seawright, who is a Belfast City councillor and a member of the Ulster Assembly, said in the interview that he supported the National Front's fight on the mainland.

It comes as no surprise that such statements in support of the British people incurred the wrath of the anti-British gutter press. Newspapers like the Dublin-based Sunday World have been gunning for George Seawright ever since.

Another Loyalist leader who is regularly smeared by the Sunday World is the Reverend Ian Paisley.

Five members of Dr Paisley's Democratic Unionist Party visited Israel during January as part of a so-called "fact finding mission". During the visit, they met members of the Israeli Government and visited the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

EX-TERRORISTS

Do these Loyalists need reminding that many senior members of the Israeli Government are themselves ex-terrorists who were responsible for the murder of British soldiers in Palestine? Do they need reminding that Israel's last Prime Minister, Menachem Begin, was leader of the Irgun terrorists who were responsible for the bombing of the King David Hotel which left 91 people dead?

Perhaps they have conveniently forgotten the murder of Sergeant Clifford Martin and Sergeant Mervyn Paice, the two British soldiers who were slow-hanged with piano wire by Jewish terrorists who then booby-trapped their bodies. Perhaps they need reminding that a total of 234 British people were murdered by Jewish terrorists who wanted to get the 'Brits' out.

Another fact which hard-line Protestants might find interesting is the rabid anti-Protestant views which prevail among the Jewish community in Britain.

In a recent issue of the Jewish Chronicle two Jews viciously attacked the Protestant faith under the heading of "Why Defend Luther?"

Ben Miller, a North London Jew, had this to say about Martin Luther, the founder of the Protestant church: "When he found that the Jews would and could not accept his Protestant Christianity any more than the Catholic form of Christianity his rage and disappointment knew no restraint; his anti-Jewish tirades, his invective and hatred were contrary to all he had said previously".

Meanwhile, Rabbi Jonathan J. Klijeger wrote: "Having lived in Germany, I am surprised to see a Jew defending Martin Luther. Even for today's Germans, Luther is anti-semitic and in his book, The Jews And Their Lies, Luther writes that the Jews should be chased from the towns and that their houses should be burned".

The National Front wholeheartedly supports the cause of Ulster Loyalism, but we cannot give our wholehearted support to Loyalist leaders who seem unaware of the full range of enemies that are working to subvert British Nationalism.

Unlike the D.U.P. delegation which went to Israel, the National Front remembers the Jewish terror campaign against the British Army in Palestine. As far as we are concerned the Jewish terrorists who blew British soldiers to pieces in 1948 are no better than the Irish Republican terrorists who are blowing British soldiers to pieces in 1984. Unlike the D.U.P. delegation, we won't forgive and we definitely won't forget.

No Cruise

* THE US has already started to deploy the first of a total of 160 Cruise missiles in Britain. With 103 military installations in the UK, and some 30,000 servicemen over here, Britain is no more than a giant US military camp.

* THE Yanks are presently talking about a "limited nuclear war". This means that the Soviets will strike against countries which house Cruise — including Britain.

* THE Tories claim that Britain and the US will have 'dual control' over the Cruise missiles. Yet, US Admiral Gene La Rocque recently stated: "There is no agreement, absolutely none. We would never give Mrs Thatcher or any other British Prime Minister the right to veto our nuclear weapons".

* BRITAIN will spend some £16 million on redeveloping the Greenham Common airbase with shelters and facilities for the US 51st Tactical Missile Wing. Greenham Common will house 96 Cruise missiles.

* BECAUSE Cruise is stored in a fixed land-based silo, it is a prime target for conventional or nuclear attack. Once Cruise leaves its home base for its destination area, it must travel about 50 miles — at a top speed of 18 mph. This way it remains exposed to enemy attack for about three hours.

* ONCE launched, Cruise is a slow mover, and can be attacked or electronically decoyed on its 2½ hour flight to its target.

* THROUGHOUT its journey, carrying a nuclear warhead, Cruise will have to pass over the densely populated area of southern England, and then across Europe.

"We hate the British"

ULSTER Loyalists who still have sympathy for Israel may be interested to learn of this quote by Israel Levy who was a member of Menachem Begin's terrorist group. Levy was involved in the bombing of the King David Hotel in which 91 people were murdered:—

"I hated them (the British), we all did: all the young people were joining the Irgun or the Stern Gangs. I decided I'd do anything to get the British out. I will always have the blood on my hands. But when I walk through these corridors now, I feel I did something worthwhile, something historical. I remember every detail of the operation and I think perhaps that my grandfather would be proud".

No Disarmament

MANY of Nationalism Today's readers will have seen the disturbing T.V. film, The Day After, which was a horrific, if not too accurate portrayal of life after a nuclear war. It is not surprising that many British people are concerned by the war-mongering of Reagan, Thatcher and Andropov, and are desperate to find some way of getting out of the present 'arms race'.

Some genuinely misguided people are being fooled into believing that the Labour Party are the only ones who can save them from oblivion, and yet Labour's Defence Policy is confused to say the very least! Still insisting that only by scrapping nuclear weapons can Britain hope to avoid a devastating nuclear attack, they then reveal their commitment to 'maintain and improve defence capability within NATO'.

The Defence Policies of the Labour Party far from ensuring peace and security for Britain, are more likely to encourage any possible aggressor. It is not Britain's possession of a nuclear deterrent that makes her an inevitable target, in the event of a war between the Imperialist Super-Powers, but her present involvement with the 'Yankee' controlled NATO.

Only with the Nationalist Defence Policies, that include the removal of American Bases from our soil, pulling out of NATO and maintaining an independent nuclear capability, can Britain remain truly secure and free.

SELF DEFENCE IS NO OFFENCE — ARMED NEUTRALITY NOW!

Taking liberties in the name of Law and Order

THE CONSERVATIVE Party is currently stripping away individual liberties in the name of "law and order" at a rate which should be alarming to anyone who is disturbed by the prospect of a massive increase in State Power.

The Tories, far from defending the Nation's freedoms, are casually tossing them to one side as a sacrifice to their reactionary statism. There is perhaps no time in the recent history of Britain when there has been a greater or more persistent threat, from within our own society, to individual freedom. This is amply demonstrated in the current Parliamentary calendar which is full of so-called "law and order" measures.

Each Bill is ostensibly concerned with such worthy objectives as crime prevention or national security, but under closer scrutiny each restricts individual freedom without even beginning to meet their purported aims.

The state of the nation's freedoms, judging by the current Parliamentary agenda, shows a drifting towards a more authoritarian society!

The Data Protection Bill, in spite of its purported intention to safeguard privacy, excludes entire information systems from the need to register, including all police and national security files. It allows the wholesale transfer of confidential information, such as medical and social work files, to the police, even when no crime has been committed.

The Prevention of Terrorism Bill, currently an emergency measure, may soon become fully a part of the constitutional position in Britain. This is so despite the fact that less than 8 per-cent of those arrested under its auspices in Britain have actually been charged with an offence.

The Telecommunications Bill will make it easier for the police to tap telephones with the Home Secretary's warrant.

The Police and Criminal Evidence Bill extends the power to stop and search and allows detention in police custody for 96 hours without charge, including the right to hold suspects incommunicado for 36 hours.

The cumulative effect of these provisions is a formidable increase in the powers of the police over the citizen, and the State over the individual, on a scale without precedent in the recent past.

Many people will welcome these powers, but will do so because they believe wrongly that they are necessary to fight serious crime. But the police already have adequate power to arrest, detain and charge those where there is evidence of a criminal offence. The new powers are given precisely because no sufficient evidence exists; thus some of the most basic rights of the individual are being dispensed with.

When all of these erosions of individual freedom are considered alongside the latest efforts of the Jewish Board of Deputies to put pressure on the Government to strengthen the Race Relations Act even further, it can be seen that the freedom of the White British people is in very grave danger indeed.

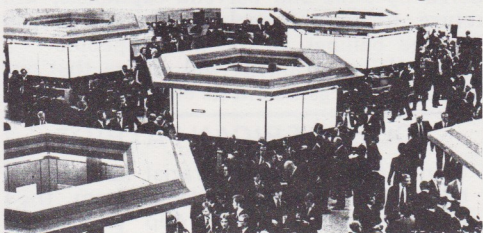

Playing Monopoly

THE concentration of power in the hands of sectional interest groups represents a dangerous threat to the nation as a whole. This is one of the fundamental principles of British Nationalism.

Since the ownership or control of extreme wealth confers great political, as well as financial, power, a study of the changing pattern of share ownership shows how one small group of people are steadily gaining massive power in Britain.

Over the last twenty years the small private investor has been a steady net seller of shares on the stock exchange. Throughout that period the contractual savings industry — mainly the insurance companies and the pension funds — has been a net buyer of shares, currently to the extent of buying over £10 billion of shares a year.

As a result around 60% of all UK ordinary shares quoted on the Stock Exchange are owned by the insurance companies and the pension funds, with a total valuation of around £125 billion pounds. The effect of this shift in ownership has been to concentrate enormous power into very few hands. Investment funds of £40 billion pounds are now controlled by a mere 30 fund managers.

For example Ronald Artus of the Prudential has investment funds of over one billion pounds to spend each year. As Peter Shearlock, City Editor of the Sunday Times, put it "The Pru started to use the muscle its financial status gave it as long ago as 1956". Describing Artus, Shearlock said "The 'Man from the Pru' is wooed assiduously by Britain's boardroom bosses. His approval is eagerly sought in any new move. His backing in a takeover attempt — or bid defence — is tantamount to a moral imperative".

The likes of Ronald Artus may not actually own billions but they certainly control billions, and it's this control that gives them greater financial — and thus ultimately political — power than most of our elected politicians.

If the ownership and control of British industry is going to be spread more widely amongst the British people then the abolition of the Stock Exchange and the dissolution of powerful financial cliques, such as the pension funds and insurance companies in their present forms, will be a vital first step.

THE PRISONER

NATIONAL INSURANCE NUMBERCARD

THE Government has announced its intention to issue everyone in Britain with a National Insurance Numbercard during the next 3 years. They claim that there is nothing sinister about this development, but if this is so why do they refuse to answer this question: Why does this Big Business manufactured card carry a magnetic strip, thus allowing very personal information to be carried in a coded, invisible form?

Americans were issued with such cards in 1972 as part of a process culminating in the introduction of National Identity Cards. These cards are also the rule in Communist terror states, for they make social control of the population very much easier.

We must resist the move towards a plutocratic Police State. If you value your few remaining freedoms refuse to use these cards. Remember: there is NO LEGAL OBLIGATION TO ACCEPT THEM. Say No! to Big Brother, say No! to Big Business.

A LANDLORD WITH A DIFFERENCE..

IT IS not often that Nationalism Today can find reason to praise businessmen, but in the case of Chris Nicholson, an energetic 35 year-old shipping and forwarding agent from Coventry, we are pleased to be able to make an exception.

Nicholson is an absentee English landlord who owns an island off the Scottish Highlands, a fact which, when taken at face value, should incur the wrath of the Highlanders and Radical Nationalists alike. But Nicholson is no ordinary absentee landlord.

He bought the tiny island of Easdale in Argyre for £14,500 four years ago, and since then he has spent most of his spare cash trying to crank up its economy and revitalise the local community.

Where other Highland lairds have been content to cultivate their deer stalking and salmon fishing at the expense of local village communities, Nicholson has dredged the harbour, rebuilt the pier, enticed five prawn-fishing boats into Easdale because there are no harbour dues and has built footpaths and fences. On top of this he has rebuilt cottages and opened a prize-winning folk museum.

Nicholson is very frank about his motivations for pumping so much money into the island. "I'm doing it because I love Easdale and I love the Highlands", he told a Sunday Times reporter, "And I think the people of the Highlands have had a very raw deal over the years. I want to bring people back to Easdale, and the only way to do that is to get the economy going, so people have jobs on which to bring up their families".

Easdale was once home to more than four hundred people, most of whom worked in the slate quarries for which it was famous.

But in 1881 a tidal wave dumped millions of gallons of seawater into most of the quarries, and the slate workers fled to Ballachulish and Westmoreland.

Nicholson told the Sunday Times that when he bought the island in 1979 it was "knackered". "There was water and slag everywhere" he said, "Many of the houses were ruins with their roofs off. The harbour had fallen in, and the population consisted of 14 people, most of them pensioners". Now, he told the Sunday Times, forty-five people, including fifteen children, live there.

Although the landlord/tenant system is far from the Nationalist ideal, this revitalisation of the island of Easdale by Chris Nicholson is the best that can be done under the present system. He says he will never sell the island for profit and he has already willed it to the National Trust for Scotland, with the revenue from the salmon fishing, among the things to be used for its maintenance.

Any efforts to revive the outlying rural areas of Britain must be supported because the present drift of people towards the conurbations in the South East can only have disastrous effects upon the cultural and political well-being of the British nation.

Chris Nicholson and the inhabitants of Easdale.

THE ARTFUL DODGERS

THE GENIUS of a Nation, whether it be in Painting, Literature, Sculpture or Music, belongs as an Absolute Right to the country from whose soil it springs, for a Nation and People are a living organism, a continuum through time linking our ancestors through us to our descendants. Art is the finest expression of that organism; if the treasure house of National Art is looted, be it by barbarians or the Mega-Rich, the Nation loses not only its claim to sovereignty, but some of the very substance of its existence. If there is no Tradition or Heritage, there is no living Nation.

The last decade or so has seen the emergence of a new word: Artopoly. It is an expensive game involving art dealers, museum curators, critics and art consultants, a game where enjoyment of Art is no longer held to be worthy of consideration. For the Art world (better, Art industry), aesthetics are outmoded, the new reference point being Money. This is made clear when you realize the world of Artopoly is dominated by such paragons of 'good taste' as Saatchi & Saatchi and Rockefeller's One World Trilateral Commission. Art, in plutocratic-capitalist society, stands before the bottomless abyss.

In NT (No.15), we drew attention to the activities of the world's richest museum, the American Getty Museum, which spends between £25-40 million annually so as to avoid tax liability. If Getty Oil and Pennzoil merge in the near future, it will not only signal the third largest corporate takeover in American history, but also add some £850 million to the present £1.1 Billion assets of the Getty Museum and accelerate the rape and plunder of the Art treasure of Europe. If there is one thing worse than losing our Heritage, it is losing it to Yankee capitalists who know the price of everything and the value of nothing.

A signpost. Recently the Getty Museum purchased Duccio's The Crucifixion from the Earl of Crawford for £1.8 million. Complaints about "Getty prices" quickly arose and Hugh Legatt of 'Heritage in Danger' announced that the fight was on to keep the Duccio "where it belongs", the National Gallery in Scotland. However, whilst the vultures of Capitalism, incarnate in the Getty Museum, have no right to the Duccio, neither has the National Gallery. How can we seriously maintain that Art is a National possession and then seek to prevent the return of the Duccio to its rightful owners: Italy. Once the principle is mutually accepted that the Nation must retain its heritage, the Duccio will go to Rome, the Elgin Marbles to Athens, and the many works by Turner, Constable and Blake amongst others, plundered by Jews and parvenu capitalists, will return to their homeland, Britain. British heritage belongs to the British people - a future NF government will ensure that our birthright is regained in its entirety.

COUNTDOWN TO ZERO

THE world is on the hottrails to Hell — wherever we look in the world, social upheaval, civil strife and the escalation of war are the order of the day. Whilst this tendency towards intensification is partly natural in origins, it is largely the handiwork of powerful, vested interests. One has only to consider the blatant warmongering of the reactionary, Jew-dominated Reagan administration to realize that the destiny of the world is in the hands of a dummy with a big mouth and a small brain.

"Reagan plans to sink the Sandinistas" was a feature in the Sunday Times (Oct. 1983), an article that described how the CIA were training and financing counter-revolutionary groups, the 'contras', in order to set up a provisional 'Nicaraguan' government that would hastily call for American "assistance" in restoring order. Most of the contra outfits are composed of troops that were loyal to the pre-Sandinista tyranny of Anastasio Somoza. But who was Somoza other than a sick-minded dictator, who used the bogeyman of Communism, to concentrate the wealth of Nicaragua into the hands of his family; this family was placed at the head of the nation before the Second World War because they were puppets amenable to Yankee imperialism.

Dear old Ronnie justifies this gross meddling in Nicaraguan affairs by citing the freedom of the so-called 'Free World'; it is his policy of "combatting communism". But everything he does to oppose Communism actually advances this brutal creed, for what is the difference between a Somoza and a Castro? If the Nicaraguan peasantry is being ruthlessly oppressed and exploited, does it matter one jot whether the oppression is maintained in the name of "the free market" or of the "Marxist classless society"?

It is typical of the Washington cabal that it simultaneously claims to be defending its 'backyard' from subversion and then sanctions global CIA subversion. This 'backyard' includes Nicaragua, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Lebanon, Turkey, Chad, Britain, West Germany etc, etc. No doubt, if life is ever discovered on Mars Reagan will send in troops and CIA operatives to forestall the establishment of a Martian Soviet Republic!

MARXIST REGIME

The Sandinista government is a Marxist regime and is thus inimical to the people and interests of Nicaragua, but if Reagan is so committed to their freedom, why is he conspiring against the people's champion, Eden Pastora, the legendary Commander Zero? Unlike Alfredo Cezar and Alfonso Robelo, millionaire lackeys from the Somoza era and chiefs of CIA funded contras, Commander Zero is a National Revolutionary equally opposed to U.S. and Soviet domination. The Economist stated: "He is something of a national hero unlike the former National Guardsmen. His entry into the battle would give the anti-Sandinista movement a better claim to legitimacy".

Reagan is not interested in legitimacy, since the American legislature is of bastard origins, long ago having become the plaything of Jews and capitalists. For Reagan the removal of Commander Zero is the urgent priority, for given the choice of National Revolutionary Social Justice or Capitalism/Communism the Nicaraguans will choose National Revolution; Reagan's 'democracy' seeks to deny the people this choice.

"Commander Zero"

The peoples of Nicaragua and Britain reject the Yanks. We demand the crushing of US imperialism, the overthrow of the unpopular Sandinista regime and the establishment of the Nicaraguan National Revolution! Nicaragua for the Nicaraguans! Britain for the British!

WHITE MAN'S BURDEN

A DECADE after the calamitous drought that struck Africa's Sahel region, vast sections of the continent are gripped by food shortages, as the population continues to rise faster than food production. Around 150 million people in 22 countries are critically short of food supplies in Eastern and Western Africa and in the previously unaffected Southern part.

The situation is being monitored by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation (F.A.O.) in Rome. FAO director general, Edouard Saouma, set up a special task force to act on the situation. The task force issued a report calling for 3.2 million tons of food for the affected countries in 1983-84. Of this, 700,000 tons of food and 76 million dollars for agricultural needs were recommended as immediate aid. On top of this Saouma begged for nations to make contributions on top of those taken from UN funds.

The United States announced a commitment of 25 million dollars, in emergency food aid. The Netherlands said it was contributing 20 million dollars in assistance, and Switzerland 2.3 million dollars. Additional pledges of food and other forms of assistance came from Canada, Denmark, West Germany, Sweden, the European Economic Community and Britain.

When will the West wake up to the fact that keeping the Third World alive on a financial life support system is not the answer. The present policy of pouring money into Africa and Asia will only ease the liberal conscience of the Establishment and not help the vast problems that do exist. Only by reversing the present trend so that the birth rate starts to fall and food production rises, can stability even be contemplated. The first step is education.

By repatriating the coloured immigrants to their lands of origin, those who have taken advantage of our education system and become doctors, nurses, teachers, engineers, etc, can educate their racial kinsman in those things necessary to build some semblance of a stable society and allow those countries to stand on their own two feet.

Caught in the Crossfire

REAGAN'S decision to send in bombers to blitz Syrian Army positions was not only unsuccessful but inviting of Syrian counter-measures certain to embroil the Yanks in even more questionable retaliatory action.

America appears pre-occupied with acting as Israel's macho body-guard, but that is hardly supposed to be the reason for her presence in this area of the Middle East. It is time America's troops were kicked out of this region. Reagan doesn't want an impartial policing body, but mercenary recruits for Israel, to appease his Zionist scriptwriters and paymasters back home.

The obvious truth is that there is no place for any 'peace keeping' contingent in this very complex situation. It is not the case where you have one side fighting another and all that needs to be done is to keep them apart. There are so many hostile groups trying to kill each other that all a 'peace keeping' force will become is yet another faction to be caught in the crossfire.

YNF—The Future Calls

THE formation of the Young National Front at the end of 1977 was without doubt one of the most significant developments in our Party's short history. It had already been apparent for some time that a disproportionate number of our recruits were coming from the ranks of the young, and in the form of the YNF we at last had a weapon with which to fight the Left on what had previously been seen to be its own ground — in the classrooms and the colleges. The birth of the YNF, even in 1977, was long overdue; its importance in the struggle which lay ahead immeasurable.

That such a large proportion of our membership is made up of young people should not come as a great surprise. It is this generation which was born at a time when the world was beginning to recover from the shock of the so-called Holocaust. The ridiculous charge of "Nazi" invokes less horror in today's teenager than it would do his mother or father, who will usually have succumbed to even the most absurd of war-time fairy stories. More importantly, it is this generation which suffers most at the hands of this immoral and selfish Capitalist system; a system which can promise them nothing but a life on the dole in an Americanised, bastardised multi-racial sewer.

ACTION

Once established, the Young National Front sprang into action with an admirable zeal. The launching of Bulldog, albeit then in a very basic format, achieved nationwide publicity. The outrage displayed by Marxist and trendy liberal teachers at the sight of YNF leafletters outside their schools was matched by the interest and support of the White youth in the classroom. Lively demonstrations, marches, national rallies — all had the desired effect of bringing more and more young blood into the ranks of the National Front. A social programme of football tournaments, darts leagues and the like made the YNF very much a "way of life". Ideology and policy seminars flourished, and this at a stage when the NF was far less ideologically mature than it is today.

In the last few years, however, the emphasis on youth activity appears to have faded somewhat. The YNF Secretariat ceased to be, and all activity in which the Party involved itself became generated from "the top". To give the very capable organisers of the erstwhile YNF a free hand to produce their own activity would amount to an act of delegation, and that just would not do.

Now, fortunately, there appears to have been a change of attitude at senior level. Delegation is no longer a dirty word, and those who have the time and the willingness to assist with the development of a particular aspect of the Party can and will be expected to do so without interference. It is indeed a healthy sign that we have enough organisers with the necessary talents to be able to specialise in the building of specific departments of the Party.

In keeping with the spirit of this new approach, the YNF Secretariat was re-established at the end of last year with the aim of strengthening NF support and membership amongst young people. The revitalised YNF was launched with a "lightning" anti-IRA activity in Knightsbridge, just one day after the horrific Harrods bombing. It is this type of immediate response activity which will enable us to hit the headlines whilst the theme of the activity is still topical, and to shake the Establishment by not allowing it time to suppress us.

It is essential that we put our unemployed youngsters to work during the day. Apart from selling papers, thus improving the sales performance of our branches, teams of unemployed members must regularly leaflet dole queues, schools and colleges. For this purpose we shall be constructing a register of unemployed YNF activists, and sending them onto the streets day after day. At branch level, units should where possible form and organise YNF cells within local schools. The effect that even a couple of dedicated YNF activists in a school can have on its political life and the attitude of its teachers is difficult to exaggerate.

COMRADESHIP

The social aspect of YNF activity is also of great importance. If members are to be kept and continue to be active in their service to the Party, then it is essential that a spirit of comradeship is built up between them. Social gatherings, sporting activities and so on will not only raise money for the Party, they will also fill a vacuum in the lives of our young members. If both their political and their social lives come to revolve around the NF, then we will have them for good, as they will effectively be living for the Party.

As at the time of its inception, the YNF intends to produce its own propaganda. This propaganda will be topical and readable. Now the NF is free of reactionaries and racial Conservatives we can push our economic policies, our solutions to the heart-break of unemployment. When we bring our solutions to the evils of multi-racialism and mass unemployment to the dole queues and to the schools, we must and will outmanoeuvre the alien, internationalist Left. We will take the battle into the colleges and universities, once the sole preserve of the Marxists, with a barrage of intelligent and thought-provoking Social Nationalist propaganda on a scale of which up until now we have only talked.

We have Bulldog, a very much more professional publication than it was in its early days, and it has now been expanded to eight pages. We have Rock Against Communism, with a number of willing Nationalist rock bands, including the increasingly popular Skrewdriver. These are both important to us as a means of bringing more and more working-class White youths into the reach of the NF.

A very encouraging development for the NF in recent weeks has been the deploying of "instant response groups" for short-notice, topical activities. Such activities do not require maximum turn-outs, as do marches, but stand a greater chance of grabbing valuable publicity in the future. The Young National Front intends to complement these with its own such activities. With a good rapport existing between the organisers of both we can ensure the maximum effect.

To those who would prefer the old approach whereby they would be called upon to attend the occasional march, or to agree to stand as a candidate in an election once in a blue moon, and feel they have done mankind a great service, I have this to say. The National Front is not a pastime; something to do when one has nothing better planned. We are in the business of building our Party into a mass movement, a movement which must and will be capable of taking power in the United Kingdom and governing this nation in the true interests of her people. We in the YNF are in the business of building a powerful youth wing from which will emerge tomorrow's organisers, tomorrow's ideologues, tomorrow's leaders. In our search for ways in which to build our Party and to bring our message home to the British people, no stone must remain unturned. Where the YNF is concerned, I am determined that no stone will remain unturned.

DEFEND OUR ACTIVISTS!

The Militant Patriots Legal Defence and Aid Fund has recently paid out large sums of money to help NF activists who have fallen foul of the Establishment.

Payments to members fined for "illegal assembly" after delivering a petition to Gravesend town hall now total £300 and more will be needed. Other members need help in cases now pending.

Action against the Yorkshire police for their illegal prevention of the NF's anti-IRA march and for the unlawful detention of our activists, will also need funds.

The MPLDAF will only be able to continue to support our activists if donations keep coming in.

Many supporters give regularly and generously, and special thanks are due to them. Can YOU help as well?

Please send as much as you can to: The Treasurer, MPLDAF, P.O. Box 228 Manor Park, London E.12.

All donations over £3 will be acknowledged.

HILAIRE BELLOC

HILAIRE BELLOC was one of the great political radicals of Edwardian Britain. He coined the term 'Distributism' and, along with G.K. Chesterton, he was the greatest exponent of the Distributist outlook.

Belloc will be most remembered by Racial Nationalists for his Essay On The Restoration Of Property and his Servile State, as well as his brilliant expose of Zionism in his book The Jews.

ON CAPITALISM . . .

"I use the term 'Capitalism' here to mean a state of society in which a minority control the means of production, leaving the mass of the citizens dispossessed. Such a dispossessed body of citizens is called a 'Proletariat'."

"There will be under Capitalism a conscious, direct and planned exploitation of the majority, the free citizens who do not own, by the minority who are owners."

"Capitalism destroys security".

ON COMMUNISM . . .

"Under Communism the means of production are controlled by the officers of the State, who are the masters of all the workers (slaves of the State), and the wealth produced is distributed, at the discretion of the State officials, among the families, or, if an attempt be made to abolish even the family, then among the individuals of the community".

ON PARLIAMENTS . . .

"Parliaments have everywhere proved irreconcilable with democracy. They are not the people. They are oligarchies, and those oligarchies are corrupt because they pretend to a false character and to be, or to mirror, the nation. They are in reality, and can only be, cliques of professional politicians".

ON BOLSHEVISM . . .

"Bolshevism is a Jewish movement".

"Bolshevism stated the Jewish problem with a violence and an insistence such that it could no longer be denied either by the blindest fanatic or the most resolute liar".

"As for anyone who does not know that the present revolutionary Bolshevik movement is Jewish in Russia, I can only say that he must be a man taken in by the suppressions of our deplorable press".

ON ADVERTISING . . .

"Advertising has become one of the worst plagues of English modern life . . . this fungoid growth of advertising has done evil beyond anything which our fathers could have imagined. Undoubtedly it is the strongest of the forces which have so degraded our Press. The Press cannot print, even where it should so desire (and being itself in the hands of monopolists it does not so desire to print) any truth which the great advertisers desire to have suppressed. And that is why our field of vision even on the most urgent public affairs, grows narrower and narrower".

Roots

A series of articles featuring quotes from some of the people who laid the foundations of Nationalist ideology.

"Men take what is imposed upon them and not what they themselves choose. Supply controls demand and not demand supply".

ON MATERIALISM . . .

"The truth is always the same. That great mass of wage-earners upon which our society now reposes understands as a present good all that will increase even to some small amount their present revenue and all that may guarantee them against those perils of insecurity to which they are perpetually subject. They understand and welcome a good of this kind, and they are perfectly willing to pay for that the corresponding price of control and enregimentation, exercised in gradually increasing degree by those who are their paymasters.

ON THE JEWS . . .

"The Jews are an alien body within the society they inhabit".

"The two main Jewish forces which exasperate and maintain the sense of friction between the Jews and their hosts are first of all the Jewish reliance upon secrecy, and, secondly, the Jewish expression of superiority".

"We dare not, will not teach in our history books the plain facts of the relations between our own race and the Jews. We throw the story of these relations, which are among the half-dozen leading factors of history, right into the background even when we do mention it. In what they are taught of history the school boy and the undergraduate come across no more than a line or two upon those relations. The teacher can not be quite silent upon the expulsion of the Jews under Edward 1, or upon their return under Cromwell. A man cannot read the history of the Roman Empire without hearing of the Jewish war. A man cannot read the Constitutional History of England without hearing of the special economic position of Jews under the Mediaeval crown.

But the vastness of the subject, its permanent and insistent character through-out two thousand years; its great episodes; its general effects — all that is deliberately suppressed".

ON RACE . . .

"A community has a right to organise its own life and no aliens therein have a claim to modify that life or to disturb it".

ON CHAIN-STORES . . .

"Chain shops have destroyed the individual shopkeeper. Where there were, say, forty thousand independent grocers, there came to be forty thousand managers, the wage slaves of a combine because the cost of administration is less, and this economic advantage handicaps the small man against the great. It has gone on all around us during the past generation at a pace which has increased, in England at least, out of all knowledge, until today on all sides we are gripped by monopoly. Those of my generation can remember a time when for a hundred necessities of daily life individual shops or craftsmen were present throughout London. Today they are fast disappearing; most of them have already gone".

ON PRIVATE PROPERTY . . .

"If we do not restore the Institution of Property we cannot escape restoring the Institution of Slavery; there is no third course".

"Widely distributed property as a condition of freedom is necessary to the normal satisfaction of human nature".

"Through well-divided property alone can the units of society react upon the State. Through it alone can a public opinion flourish. Only where the bulk of the cells are healthy can the whole organism thrive. It is therefore our business to restore economic freedom through the restoration of the only institution under which it flourishes, which institution is Property. The problem before us is, how to restore Property so that it shall be, as it was not so long ago, a general institution".

ON COMPETITION . . .

"Competition is, as a fact, restricted to an increasing extent by an understanding between the competitors accompanied, especially in this country, by the ruin of the smaller competitor through secret conspiracies entered into by the larger men, and supported by the secret political forces of the State".

ON LIBERTY . . .

"If liberty of purchase and of sale, of mortgage and of inheritance was restricted, it was restricted with the social object of preventing the growth of an economic oligarchy which could exploit the rest of the community. The restraints upon liberty were restraints designed for the preservation of liberty".

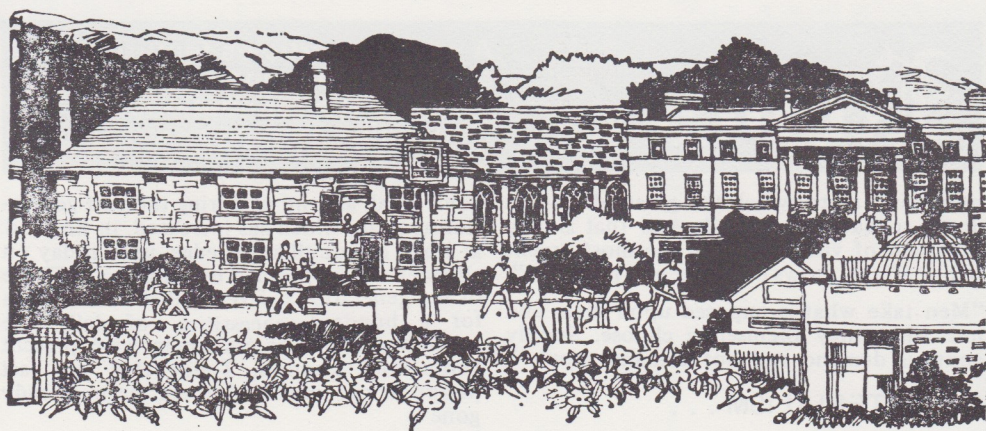

ON USURY . . .

"Usury is at once very wicked and — in pure economics, and as a merely mathematical statement — it can be proved to proceed in action to the ultimate ruin of the community".

ACID RAIN DESTROYS BRITAIN'S WILDLIFE

MORE than 120 Scottish lochs and rivers and 11 lakes and streams in the Lake District are seriously contaminated by acid rain, a report published in January disclosed.

Furthermore, the report continued, this will lead Britain towards total environmental disaster unless something is done soon. Agriculture is already estimated to be losing at least £25 million a year through acid-stunted growth, and fish stocks in many Welsh salmon and trout rivers are declining because of increased acidity.

The report added that corrosion is causing millions of pounds worth of damage to buildings and machines.

The figures were published in the January issue of Footloose, the environment and outdoor pursuit magazine, which urged the Government to act swiftly to control acid pollution from car exhausts, power stations and industry.

Acid rain is caused by sulphur dioxide and nitrous oxide from smoke and fumes dissolved in tiny water droplets in the atmosphere. These fall as rain contaminated by sulphuric and nitric acids.

Footloose was one of the first voices raised against acid rain in Britain just under two years ago. Since then the situation has deteriorated rapidly.

"There have been a lot of platitudes from the Government, but no action", said the report's author, Mr Donald Philpott. "The great danger is that we will not act until it is too late".

"Everywhere the problem is the same", he continued. "The acidity of the rainfall is increasing, and therefore the acidity of the water running into streams and lakes.

"First the insects die, then the young fish and finally the mature fish. The birds and animals that rely on them are the next to suffer as their bodies take in dangerous levels of toxic chemicals.

"And if the tree population is decimated that could have effects on oxygen production".

The response of the Tory Government to these alarming figures was absolutely pathetic. They recognised that the destruction to wildlife caused by acid rain was widespread but they refused to take any action until even more reports had been commissioned. This may keep dozens of bureaucratic civil servants busy for a few more years but it will do nothing to save British wildlife.

And the threat to the British countryside is a very real one when one considers the damage caused by acid rain in Europe and America.

In West Germany the great forests, which cover a third of the country, are literally being killed by the rain.

The Black Forest is an integral part of the folk heritage of Germany, being a rich source of myth and song, but now industrial pollution is sounding the death toll. Here and there in the forest, hand-lettered signs posted on trees by protestors sound a grim note: "Dying forest" . . . "I am being killed by air pollution".

And the signs do not exaggerate. The Black Forest is dying.

"If pollution continues at the present rate" says Gerhard Weiser, agriculture and forestry minister for Baden-Wurttemberg, "most of the fir and spruce trees in the Black Forest will be dead by the 1990's". In the past two years, the number of healthy firs has dropped alarmingly from 66 per-cent to only one per-cent. In some areas, 94 per-cent of spruce trees are also affected.

UNHEALTHY TREES

"Two years ago, there wasn't an unhealthy tree here," says Karl-Viktor Gutzweiler, head forester of a 15,000 acre section of Black Forest near Baden Baden. "Now half of my firs are sick, really sick, and a third of my spruce are going.

"When you cut down a tree, you can tell from the rings that the disease started ten years ago. Until then, you got regular, well-spaced rings showing good growth. From the early 1970's, the growth is more stunted and uneven. By the time the symptoms are visible it is already too late".

However, acid rain is not only killing wildlife in Britain and Germany. It is caused by industrial pollution and, as such, acid rain is affecting the whole of the industrialised world. For instance, even higher levels of acid rain than are present in either Germany or Britain have been recorded in Scandinavia and North America.

Whole forests have been decimated by acid rain in Norway, while in Canada and the US

thousands of lakes and rivers are no longer able to support plants and fish. Air pollution from the giant industrial centres of the Great Lakes is the biggest thorn in current Canadian-US relations. The American National Commission on Air Quality admits that the US exports four times as much pollution to Canada as it imports from it.

Although half of Canada's acid rain comes from US power plants, the world's biggest source of sulphur dioxide pollution is, ironically, Canadian. The nickel and copper smelting plant at Sudbury, Ontario pours out more than a million tonnes of sulphur dioxide into the atmosphere each year. This sulphur dioxide is, in turn, falling back to earth as sulphuric acid in rain water.

But it is in Germany that people are beginning to realise the full implications of rain pollution. Professor Peter Schuett reminded us that the forests are essential for replacing oxygen into the atmosphere. If the forests are killed by acid rain, then there must be a drop-back in the amount of oxygen replaced. "We are on the point of destroying the basis of our life" he said.

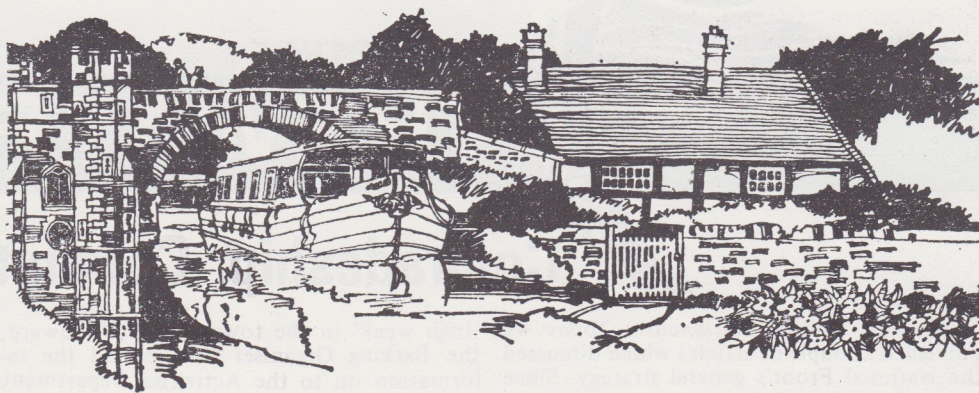

Meanwhile, a German conservationist group preferred to recite the wisdom of an old German proverb: "First the forests die, then man" . . .

AS A POST-SCRIPT to the main thrust of this article, it is worth noting a recent development which epitomises the attitude of the Tory Government to the problem of acid rain pollution in this country.

On January 17th, just two weeks after the publication of the report on acid rain in Footloose magazine, the Government announced that it was granting millions of pounds in aid for a forestry scheme which involves the continuous planting and harvesting of trees over 75,000 acres of land. At first sight it would appear that this Government aid should be applauded since it would help to replace trees which have been killed by acid rain. There is one snag, however, the Government aid is going to India and the trees are to be planted in the Indian state of Karnataka.

The amount which the Tories have granted to India is £25 million! Exactly the same amount which it is estimated British agriculture is losing each year thanks to acid rain pollution!

THE FRONT

CAPITALISM—The Last Straw

ANYONE who drove through the English countryside at the end of last summer will have seen the devastation wrought by the burning of millions of tons of "unwanted" straw. Hedgerows, trees, wildlife and even other people's unharvested crops were all damaged in thousands of separate incidents. Whole counties in lowland England were polluted for several weeks on end by a pall of black smoke.

Farmers here have been taught by the Ministry of Agriculture that burning is the only way to get rid of the straw efficiently and that the ash is good for the soil. In fact, the value of the minerals left by burning is very low, and there are a number of alternatives to burning and the accompanying devastation and pollution.

While farmers in the Home Counties burn huge amounts of straw as "unwanted", dairy farmers in the West Country and the upland areas of Britain have to pay outrageously high prices for winter fodder and bedding for their animals. Costs of up to £100 a tonne help to push up the price of meat and milk. Some small-holders and hill-farmers have in addition to pay so much for the delivery of small loads of straw that they simply cannot afford it.

The worst aspect of the straw-burning problem is that it is unnecessary. Much of it could be used by livestock farmers, but there are also many other uses. Although straw has only half the energy value of coal, there are a number of types of reliable straw-fired boilers, which can provide cheap heat for farmhouses, grain drying and greenhouses.

There are also several industrial uses. Most important of these could be to replace tons of imported wood-pulp in the manufacture of paper and chip-board. Back on the farm, the straw can be chopped and ploughed back into the soil to increase fertility.

All in all, British farming is a good example of the bad effects of the over-specialisation encouraged by capitalism and the Common Market in the interests of "economic efficiency". Traditional mixed farms, which had both livestock and arable land, used all their own straw and manure in a natural cycle that increased fertility and the quality of the food produced.

But since it is more "efficient" for lowland England to grow only arable crops, the smaller mixed farms have been replaced by giant "agri-business" concerns. These use heavy machinery to cultivate huge single crop fields. This makes them very productive per man, but they produce less per acre than labour intensive operations such as small-holding.

It is clearly absurd that a nation with a limited amount of agricultural land and a high unemployment rate should be more concerned with saving labour than making the best use of its farmland. But that is the warped yet inescapable logic of a System that has made short-term profit into its God.

Only when the System itself is replaced, will it be possible to rebuild the family-owned mixed farms and small-holdings that will make waste like straw-burning a thing of the past.

HERITAGE GETS THE CHOP

OVER one-third of Britain's ancient woodlands have been destroyed since 1945. Areas of outstanding natural beauty and of great historical importance have fallen to the bulldozer and chainsaw in the search for quick profits and "economic efficiency".

Worst hit county is Northamptonshire, which has lost 63% of its woodland since the 1930's, but others have fared little better. Shropshire has lost 62.9%, Lincolnshire 53.4%, Cornwall 46% and Northumberland 45%.

It is estimated that more woodland was lost between 1945 and 1975 than in the previous 400 years. Even worse is that the rate of destruction is accelerating.

This destruction of our heritage is bad enough. But when you consider that Britain has proportionately the smallest area of woodland of any West European country, it is also economically and strategically very short-sighted, because the import of timber already costs us millions of pounds every year.

There is no doubt that pressing environmental, recreational and economic needs will make large-scale re-forestation a major priority when the NF begins to reconstruct our country.

SOMETHING IN THE AIR

EARLY IN 1981 the Government's chief medical adviser Sir Henry Yellowlees recommended that all petrol sold to motorists in Britain should be lead free. In a letter to senior civil servants he wrote, "There is a strong likelihood that the lead in petrol is permanently reducing the IQ of many of our children. Although the reduction amounts to only a few percentage points some hundreds of thousands of children are affected".

The immediate response of the oil industry was to claim that lead-free high-octane petrol would take years to produce, and would be prohibitively expensive. As a result the Government decided only that by around 1990 low-octane lead-free petrol should be introduced for new cars with specially adapted engines. This means in effect that leaded petrol will continue in use until well into the next century.

However a confidential report by oil-refinery construction engineers Kvaerner Engineering which has recently become public makes it clear that the multinational companies which dominate the oil industry deliberately misled the Government into adopting their current policies.

The multinationals claimed that it would take too long to develop lead-free petrol suitable for use in all cars. In fact such petrol is already being produced in one refinery in South Humberside, and at least seven other refineries will be able to produce lead-free petrol within a few years.

The multinationals said that lead-free petrol would be too expensive to produce. In fact at their Humber Refinery Conoco are able to produce lead-free petrol for 3 pence a gallon less than at other UK refineries, thanks to their utilisation of the most advanced refining techniques.

Furthermore whilst the Government claimed that petrol with a low lead content of 0.15 grammes per litre could not be introduced to Britain until 1994 Conoco have been exporting such petrol since the late 1970's.

Not for the first time the Tories have shown themselves to be the dupes of the multinationals. Hundreds of thousands of our children are at risk because the oil companies won't spend the money necessary to modernise their refineries to produce lead-free high-octane petrol. How much longer must Britain suffer from Tory stupidity and Capitalist greed?

JOE PEARCE

THE WAY FORWARD!

Comradeship, Commitment and Direction

IN the last issue of Nationalism Today we published a couple of articles which discussed the National Front's general strategy. Since then, the NF has organised two top level strategy conferences. As a result of these meetings, the Party has now adopted a coherent strategy which should turn the organisation into a well organised machine which is capable of coming to power in the years ahead.

This being the case, it would seem the right time to look at the specific tactics which the NF has adopted to fit in with the overall strategy.

The first thing which needs to be clarified is the fact that the National Front is not under any circumstances, considering the adoption of terrorist tactics. This needs to be made clear because of the misunderstandings which arose following the publication of an article in issue 16 of NT which seemed to infer that the Party would consider such tactics.

Terrorism would serve no purpose other than to give the Establishment the excuse it needs to ban the National Front and lock up its members. We have no intention of giving the Establishment that excuse. Instead the NF is determined to achieve power by becoming better organised and more effective.

In short, the National Front has radically altered its tactics. . . .

Instant Response Groups have been set up which are capable of mobilising for 'lightning-style' activities at only a few hours notice. These Instant Response activities have not only made the National Front a far more efficient organisation, they have also gained the Party much valuable and good publicity.

The first I.R.G. activity was outside Paddington Green Police Station in early December of last year. Thomas Quigly, a suspected IRA terrorist, was being detained at the police station and the Revolutionary Communist Party were holding a demonstration outside in his support. At around 8 o'clock, just as the Reds had assembled, about forty members of the NF emerged from around a corner and took up positions opposite the R.C.P.

The demonstration was a success insofar as both the Reds and the police were taken by surprise by the NF's sudden appearance.

The next major Instant Response Group activity was an even greater success. Again the activity was organised in opposition to the IRA, but this time the venue was Grays in Essex.

A local member of the National Front living in Grays phoned up the Barking NF Branch Organiser to inform him that a number of Communist organisations were organising a pro-IRA meeting at the Thameside Theatre in Grays as part of a so-called 'Irish week' in the town. Steve Woodward, the Barking Organiser then passed the information on to the Activities Department and the Instant Response Groups were immediately mobilised.

More than fifty NF members turned up in the Essex town, and what followed can only be described as a great success. First of all, a group of about twelve members were stationed outside the main entrance of the theatre where they held a torchlight picket. The rest of the members then entered the building and attempted to enter the meeting hall.

The Reds were completely shocked when they saw about forty members of the NF turn up at the door. They barricaded themselves in and phoned the police for protection! When the police arrived they tried to keep NF members out of the hall, but quite a few still managed to infiltrate their way in. The Reds then became terrified that the National Front would completely take the meeting over so they decided to call the whole thing off. This can be considered a triumph for the Instant Response Groups, particularly when the amount of publicity which the event gained in the local press is taken into account.

NEW TACTICS

Instant Response Leaflets are another example of how the NF's new tactics are turning the Party into a more effective organisation. Being able to produce topical leaflets on events within days of them taking place inevitably means that they are far more effective in propaganda terms.

Within four days of the Harrods bombing before Christmas, the National Front was on the streets giving out special anti-IRA leaflets. These leaflets were handed out to commuters at Charing Cross and London Bridge stations and they were generally very well received.

Other examples of Instant Response leaflets include special leaflets which were produced to be handed out in Bury St. Edmunds before the 'No To Cruise, No To CND' march. A special leaflet was also produced to be handed out in Grays after the Instant Response Group demonstration there. This leaflet was produced to explain to the people of Grays why the NF had come to their town to demonstrate against the IRA.

Training Seminars are also being organised extensively as part of the NF's new strategic approach. It has long been accepted that education and training is crucial to the efficiency and continued growth of the National Front. Yet little, in real terms, has been done until now.

Now, however, things have really begun to get off the ground. A series of ten monthly lectures on various aspects of Nationalist ideology commenced on February 7th. These ten lectures, covering a wide range of subjects from finance to ruralism, add up to a full course in Nationalist ideology. This has never been attempted in the past and can only result in a far greater understanding of the Radical Nationalist world-view for all those people who attend them.

On top of this, arrangements are also being made regarding the organisation of week-end seminars in the countryside. These full week-end seminars will include sporting activities as well as seminars on ideology, strategy and practical organisation.

Finally, the National Front has set up a voluntary 'Militants' Levy. This levy has been set up as part of the new spirit of commitment which is spreading through the movement.

At last, National Front members are beginning to realise that the NF hasn't got a hope in hell of coming to power unless every leading member of the Party throws himself heart and soul into the struggle. Our enemies are so powerful that we can only beat them if we are better organised and more committed than they are.

The Instant Response Groups have gone a long way to making the National Front more effective and better organised, but the fact remains that money is absolutely crucial to the effectiveness of the movement.

If the National Front needs to do something in order to further the Cause and bring itself that much nearer to power, we can't allow that thing not to be done simply because the money is not available. Yet that is exactly what has happened in the past. Many things which could have helped the movement overcome problems have been abandoned through lack of cash. This state of affairs must be overcome and never again must the National Front be stopped from doing what needs to be done because the money is not available. The 'Militants' Levy will guarantee the Party a large enough income to ensure that lack of money will never again be an obstacle to our progress.

All of these changes lead to one thing and one thing alone. They lead to a National Front which is at last beginning to find the road to power and, which is more important, they lead to a National Front which is strong enough and organised enough to travel down that road regardless of the dangers that lie ahead.

HUMAN RIGHTS FOR LOYALIST PRISONERS!

HUNDREDS OF LOYALISTS are held in Northern Ireland's jails. Fortunately the majority of our Loyalist blood brothers are in good health. However, some fall ill whilst inside and contract serious illnesses such as Multiple Sclerosis, Diabetes and Chronic Bronchitis.

But unlike Republicans, who are released on the slightest 'medical' pretext, Loyalists are left to rot. This is the story of just one Loyalist Prisoner of War — Ardie Beck — who wrote the following letter to NT:

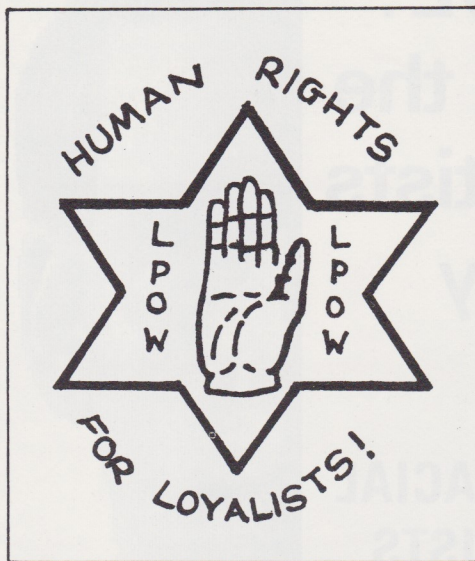

"I was lifted in February, 1978, by the RUC and sentenced in September, 1979. I served my time in the Compounds and H Blocks at Long Kesh.

In early '81 whilst playing football, I collided with another player and had to go off the pitch due to a very severe jarring pain in my back. I reported my injury to a Prison Medical Officer who noted it down and advised me to visit the Prison Doctor the next morning if the pain continued.

This I did, but the Doctor told me that my pain was just of a "muscular" nature and prescribed a 'deep heat' body rub. But this proved no good.

During this period I was working in the kitchens at Long Kesh. As I didn't want to lose my job there I still went in but the continued pain prevented me from doing much work. Some of my friends, seeing the bad state I was in, managed to get me some pain killers. However, these didn't have much effect either.

2½ months after my original football accident, some of my Comrades asked the authorities to X-ray me. Also my mother who had been visiting me at Kesh (and who had noticed the severe pain I was in) got onto the Northern Ireland Office to get me into hospital for treatment. However, the NIO didn't do a thing to help me. I then requested that my own GP examine me as by now I was still in extremely severe pain and had, in fact, lost 3 inches in height and something was obviously wrong with my spine.

My request was declined. This was 4½ months after my original accident.

Whilst I was in Kesh another prisoner died of Cancer. This had the effect of 'waking up' the Prison medical authorities who arranged for me to be X-rayed. Finally, about 6 months after my football accident I got to see a specialist, who informed me that I had physically deteriorated so much that, although I was only 26, I had the bones of an 80 year old man.

In November '81 I was transferred to a (solitary confinement) Security Wing in Musgrave Park Hospital to see another specialist. Here I was given Calcium tablets and underwent physiotherapy.

I stayed in Musgrave Park until February '82 when I was transferred back to the hospital at Long Kesh. I requested this move because there were more recreational facilities at Kesh and I would be able to mix with my fellow LPOW's who were on the hospital wing.

By this time I had about 8 months of my (near) 9 year sentence left. So bad was my health that even the Kesh Chief Officer and prison doctor advised me to put in a petition requesting further medical attention.

On the outside, Jim McDonald and Jackie Hewitt of the Loyalist Prisoners Welfare Association tried to get support for medical care for me. However, all appeals were turned down with no reason being given.

I was then sent to the hospital wing of Crumlin Road and then to Crumlin Road 'D' wing. Again I was very ill — my cell was up 3 flights of stairs, and by this time I had to rely on one of my mates to dress me and help me about the prison.

In June, 1981, (1½ years after my accident) I was let out on parole for a week. During this week I fell ill again and my mother had me rushed to the Mater Hospital. There I spent 6 weeks vomiting and passing blood.

A month later I was moved back to the Security Wing at Musgrave Park Hospital and then to Crumlin Road Hospital from where I was released in August '82.

From September '82 — March '83 I was in the Royal Victoria Hospital for Calcium injections to my spine. These improved me no end, but by now the damage to my spine had been done. Due to the incompetence of the Northern Ireland Office I've lost a total of 6 inches in height and about 3½ stone in weight. And I don't think I'll be able to work again in my lifetime.

I feel justifiably bitter and resentful towards the Government. If they had acted earlier I wouldn't be in the position I am in today".

Ardie Beck's case is just one of many where seriously ill LPOW's have been left to rot by the Prison authorities.

3. Prof. Arthur Jensen

IN ANY discussion of the Race issue, the name of Professor Hans Eysenck, whom we featured in our last issue, is inevitably linked with that of an equally distinguished scientist, Professor Arthur Robert Jensen of the University of California's Berkeley campus.

The link between these two learned men goes back to the late 1950's when Jensen worked under Eysenck at the University of London Institute of Psychiatry. In 1958 Jensen left to take up the Professorship of Educational Psychology at Berkeley, a post he has held ever since. Professor Jensen has enjoyed a brilliant scientific career, being elected to the Fellowship of the American Psychological Association, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the Eugenics Society. He is also the author of numerous important papers and books.

In 1969, in his paper "How Much can we boost IQ and scholastic achievement?", published in the Harvard Educational Review, Professor Jensen stepped forth to challenge, on behalf of scientific opinion at large, the prevailing liberal orthodoxy that intelligence differences between individuals and races were primarily the result of socio-economic and other environmental factors.

Jensen opened his brilliantly incisive demolition job on this liberal delusion by examining the outcome of educational policies based on that delusion. Throughout the 1960's, the U.S. Federal Government massively funded "compensatory education" programmes aimed at boosting the academic performance of Negro children by spending more on their education at the expense of less "deprived" children. The result of these massive positive discrimination programs were reviewed by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, which body (scarcely noted for its fanatical adherence to the cause of the White Race!) concluded, as Jensen pointed out, "that these special programmes had produced no significant improvement in the measured intelligence of scholastic performance of the disadvantaged children whose educational achievements these programs were specifically intended to improve". In other words, they had been a dismal failure.

Jensen went on to argue that the reason for this failure was that the theory of the environmental origin of differences in intelligence upon which these programs were based was itself fundamentally and hopelessly flawed. In his own words, "much of my paper was a review of the methods and evidence that led me to the conclusion that individual differences in intelligence are predominantly attributable to genetic differences, with environmental factors contributing a minor portion of the variance among individuals. The heritability of the IQ comes out at about 80%, the average value obtained from all relevant studies now reported".

Then Jensen's paper went on to confront the ultimate "taboo" — Race. And here the Professor proceeded to take the environmentalist premises and the logical conclusions they implied, and see how far the facts supported them. If, as environmentalists claim, the demonstrably poor performance of U.S. Negroes on all tests of intelligence was merely the consequence of their low social status, together with the facts that the tests in question were written by White middle class Americans, then other groups equally, or more, "disadvantaged" and divergent from middle-class U.S. cultural norms should perform equally badly, or worse. But in fact, as Jensen pointed out, they do not. "Despite greater environmental disadvantage, as assessed by 12 different indices, the (American) Indian children, on the average, exceeded the Negro in IQ and achievement. But I did not pick the environmental indices. The sociologists picked them. They are the factors most often cited by social scientists as the cause of the Negroes' poor performance on IQ tests and in school work".

Professor Jensen went on to ask: "Does not the fact that another group rates even lower than the Negro on these environmental indices (Indians are as far below Negroes as Negroes are below Whites) yet displays better intellectual performance, bring into question the major importance attributed to these environmental factors by sociologists? Or should we grant immunity from empirical tests to sociological theories when they are devised to explain racial differences?"

The "cultural differences" argument Jensen also demolished by pointing out that Mexicans in the U.S. who are socially no better off than Negroes and who have, unlike Negroes, a wholly different language and culture, score only a little below Whites on intelligence tests, and far above Negroes. Thus we are left, as Jensen rightly pointed out, with the only possible conclusion that environmental differences cannot explain the poor intelligence of Blacks, so it must be due to inborn, genetic factors.

Such a paper from America's leading educational psychologist asserting decisively that individual and racial differences in intelligence were inborn and genetic provoked a major uproar. Many liberal sociologists mindlessly abused and poured scorn on Professor Jensen as a "racist and fascist". Some called for all research on race and intelligence to be banned (such commitment to the free pursuit of Truth by impartial scientific enquiry!!) And, after Jensen soundly trounced his opponents in a debate organised in Cambridge by the British Society for Social Responsibility in Science, the sociologists called for this "dangerously persuasive" man to be "denied a platform". Their students invaded the Professor's lectures and savagely beat him up in front of Jensen's own students. But the courageous academic persevered in his heroic stand for the truth.

And there were many who listened. Professor Hans Eysenck, long a liberal multi-racialist, read Jensen's paper, confessed himself unable to perceive any flaws in the argument contained therein, and publicly proclaimed his conversion to the idea of hereditary differences in individual and racial intelligence. Eysenck's own seminal work, Race, Intelligence and Education, was written specifically in defence of Jensen.

All in all, the Professor's paper was a major breakthrough for the forces of Science and Reason over the opaque murk of Marxist, liberal and Levantine cant and ideologically-inspired bigotry. Though he has maintained his battle ever since, with a series of books and articles advancing the scientific view on the Race/IQ question, for his 1969 paper alone Professor Arthur Jensen deserves our respect as a scientist of intellectual integrity and a man of personal courage.

Trouble shooting

"THE FOUNDER of German social-democracy, Ferdinand Lassalle, was highly respected for his erudition and presence; but which politician labelled him a 'dirty Jewish nigger'?"

This is one of the questions on a quiz in Black Flag, journal of the Anarchist Black Cross. Since my review of the hilarious Black Power paper The Sniper in the last NT, a number of weird publications have arrived on my desk. Not all as funny as The Sniper, although one Women's Lib rag ("men cannot be part of the Peace Movement because men cause all the wars") came close.

Black Flag is not particularly funny, and it is only silly in places, but the answer to the question above made me read on. "Dirty Jewish nigger"! Who was the vile anti-semitic? The club-footed little doctor? The She Beast of Belson? (Even the SS feared her. Sex, Violence, Swastikas and Profits. Solly Sheissenbaum's shattering story of Lust and Vengeance in Auschwitz is showing at a cinema near You, NOW!). Or was it the Fuhrer himself, as he chewed his way through another Queensways Warehouse bargain? Why else do you think he tried to invade Britain?).

Well, er, not quite. Actually it's rather embarrassing. Lassalle may indeed have been a "dirty Jewish nigger", but Karl Marx shouldn't have written it in a letter to Engels!

So who are these people with no respect for the chief God of the irrational and twisted religious faith known as Communism?

CRANKS IN CLOAKS

Black Flag is produced by anarchists. These are not simply cranks who go around in long cloaks blowing things up. Indeed, they are at pains to point out that this is a groundless media smear — except on page 20, where a long article calls for support for the Vancouver 5, a group of decadent looking intellectual freaks nicked for allegedly bombing porn shops and a power station in Canada. (I still can't see the connection, as the electric gadgets sold in such establishments are, I am told, run by battery.)

An appeal for the 5 has, incidentally, raised the magnificent sum of £10. This includes a princely £1 from "Anon." of Streatham, the traditionally militant mining area of South London. A further £3 came from the oppressed proletarian masses of Devon, the "Tiverton Anarchists".

But as the Marx piece showed, Black Flag does have some interesting things to say. "The Bolshevik coup was the greatest misfortune to befall the workers' movement". Yes!

They want to help the peoples of the Third World "throw off the tutelage of multinational capitalism which views the world as its factory, farm and supermarket". Quite so!

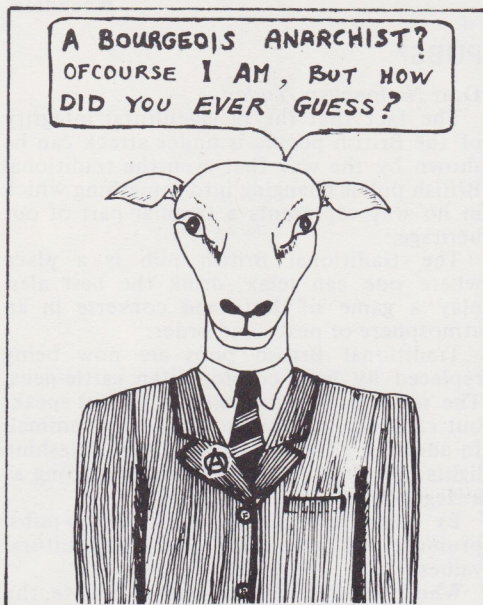

They want to — "encourage a libertarian alternative to statism and multinational consumer capitalism that is not marxism-leninism".

Splendid! It's called Distributism and it's NF policy.

There is a well-researched article on 'Brazil, the Tinder Box Economy', which includes a scathing attack on the parasitic activities of multi-national companies such as British American Tobaccos. For an initial investment of 2 million dollars, the firm has been able to loot 129.5 million dollars from Brazil. And you can wipe that smile off your face, because every time you buy a tin of beans in the International or smoke your Embassy's or John Players, you help this international octopus do the same in Britain.

The article also discusses Brazil's debt problem. Sadly, however, modern-day anarchists have no understanding of the true nature of the debt swindle, whereby the creation of credit out of nothing gives the Banks a stranglehold on the real productive wealth of the entire world. So the analysis remains shallow.

Still, at least that part of Black Flag is sane. That's more than can be said for some of the rest, which plunges from shallowness to the depths of liberal absurdity without passing through a layer of common sense on the way down.

They complain that Trotskyite fanatics in the Labour Party have lost contact with ordinary working people by supporting the IRA, declaring socialist republics and all the rest of it. Black Flag then goes on to show how it, in contrast, deals with the issues the working masses want: feminism, for example. I have never seen a magazine with so many ways of spelling "women". The problem with "women", you see, is that it includes the word "men". And, as we all know, men are revolting and violent and the whole thing is sexist.

Answer? It depends on where you write for Black Flag. If from New Zealand, you spell it "wommin". But in Canada they use the much more on-going spelling "wimmin". The "wo" bit used by the reactionaries down under has been defiled by contact with "men". Even worse, "wom" sounds as though it is going to end up as "womb", which in turn brings to mind "things" that today's feminists, like Victorian spinsters, would rather keep hidden under the covers on the piano-legs!

Even more absurd is the attitude towards race. One article talks of the way capitalism has "deliberately engineered a labour surfeit" to undermine wage claims. True, no doubt, but does Black Flag recognise that Immigration was part of that campaign? No, no! Attack Marx by all means, but don't turn on the Sacredest Cow of all — "the fascists stupidly think that it is the ethnic minorities that are taking jobs; instead they are helping to increase employment". Incredible! Do they really believe such rubbish?

No wonder Black Flag's correspondents are confused. One is angry that an earlier issue compared Gerry Adams with a butcher like Menachem Begin. Another, "Jacob", is upset that gallant Herr Begin should be likened to a murderer like Adams.

"Jacob" criticises attacks on Israel as "anti-semitic". But another writer, signing himself "God" from the Isle of Dogs, says that to call the racist Zionist State "Israel" is an insult to Jews!

LIGHT RELIEF

There's no room for more, but if you feel the need for a bit of light relief next time you're in Brixton, drop in at the 121 Bookshop in Railton Road and get a Black Flag for a mere 75p.

Alternatively, see what comes of the following challenge to its editors: you don't seem a bad bunch, more poisoned than poisonous. You are fond of referring to the anarchist leader Bakunin, even though you prefer to ignore his racist Polemic Against the Jews (1869). The NT editorial staff accordingly challenge you to a public debate on "this house believes that Bakunin would rather read Nationalism Today than Black Flag".

We look forward to printing their answer. In the meantime, let's leave the final word with Bakunin himself:

"This entire Jewish world, which forms a single profiteering sect, a people of blood-suckers, a single gluttonous parasite, closely and intimately united not only across national borders, but across all differences of political opinion — this Jewish world today stands for the most part at the disposal of Marx and at the same time at the disposal of Rothschild."

"This may seem strange. What can there be in common between Communism and the large banks? Oh! The Communism of Marx seeks enormous centralisation in the State, and where such exists, there must inevitably be a central State bank, and where such a bank exists, the parasitic Jewish nation, which speculates on the work of the people, will always find a way to prevail". (Marx and Rothschild. 1871).

HEALTHY RE-ALIGNMENT

Dear Sir,

As the Party has been undergoing a healthy re-alignment recently, it would be a good idea to cut all ties, official and 'unofficial', with Nationalist groups who flirt with Right-wing Conservative organisations.

It is true to say that Tory MPs like Harvey Procter are beyond the pale of their party's hierarchy and cannot be considered 'establishment' in the strict sense. But the strategy pursued by certain Nationalists in forging links with these Rightists does nothing except to, in the public's mind, associate ourselves with the Conservative Party, the policies of the government and ultimately the System itself.

Yours etc,

Howard Hawksley,
Merseyside.

SOLIDARITY

Dear Joe,

After reading page 6, the Home Affairs article 'Marxist Hypocrisy' with reference to Arthur Scargill and his attack on 'Solidarity' the Polish Trade Union, with respect, all it signifies is that Scargill follows the Moscow-Stalinist line, as opposed to the Trotskyite line as advocated by Solidarity.

The article inferred that Solidarity is some kind of 'free trade union', when closer examination shows that it is very far from it. The fact that Solidarity gets such a 'good press' should immediately make us highly suspicious. As should the fact that Trotskyite groups the world over have distributed leaflets and plastered inner cities with Solidarity posters, particularly the SWP in this country.

A closer examination of Solidarity and its leading 'lights' bring us to some rather unusual conclusions, that is if one were to believe the world's 'free-press'. For a start Solidarity was spawned from a rather secretive Zionist dissident pressure group known as KOR. Consider also some other facts; — that according to the U.S. TIME magazine, Solidarity's "Chief theoretician" and Lech Walesa's closest adviser is Bronislaw Geremek, whose father is a Rabbi. Karol Modzelewski, perhaps Solidarity's leading spokesman, is also Jewish. It is also widely rumoured that Walesa will not talk with Polish Government Officials unless accompanied by at least four or five of his Jewish advisers. Walesa himself has made some rather unusual statements on behalf of the downtrodden workers of Poland. In 1981 he was reported as saying he supported the IRA's struggle in Ulster.

In March of that year, which was carried by Radio 1 news bulletin Newsbeat, Walesa denounced as 'thugs' and 'hooligans' the Organisers and people who attended an Anti-Zionist rally by 1,000 people in Warsaw.

Walesa himself, has stated on numerous occasions that he "wishes to see the Party changed but not destroyed". Walesa and Solidarity are Anti-Stalinist and pro-Trotskyite.

Zionist Jews tendency to gravitate more behind Trotskyist communism than Stalinist communism, may provide some clue as to why the Zionist Western controlled Media portrays Solidarity and its gentle front-man as some kind of latter-day martyr.

All the best,

Yours sincerely,

Peter Barker,
Rochdale.

PUBS?

Dear Nationalism Today,

The fact that the racial-cultural integrity of the British people is under attack can be shown by the way that even the traditional British pub is changing into something which in no way represents a familiar part of our heritage.

The traditional British pub is a place where one can relax, drink the best ales, play a game of darts and converse in an atmosphere of peace and order.

Traditional British pubs are now being replaced by ugly cosmopolitan cattle-pens. The 'music' is so loud that you cannot speak, but can only gesticulate like a dumb animal. In addition you have to put up with flashing lights and 'beer' which is about as strong as a Negro brain-cell.

By their very nature, these 'Disco-pubs' promote multi-racialism and alien cultural values.

When we establish our racial-folk state, the ordinary public house — like so much of our great heritage — will once again represent the true cultural character of the British people.

Yours faithfully,

Steve Smith,
East London.

ORGANISATIONAL STRUCTURE

Dear NT,

First of all, I would like to congratulate you on starting 1984 the same way you finished 1983; with thought provoking articles which can only benefit the Nationalist Cause. NT has become a successful weapon in getting our ideology across to the people as well as new Nationalist comrades.

In issue 19 of NT, Adrian Wiltshire argues for a form of organisational structure within the National Front. This I feel is long overdue. The National Front is a Revolutionary Nationalist party of the 1980's, and its internal structure should reflect the Revolutionary commitment of its members (or lack of commitment).

I will not argue for or against the Divisional Structure proposed by Adrian Wiltshire as this would finally be up to the Directorate to decide the shape and nature of the internal structure. But whatever method is agreed on, it is a must that one is finalised soon so that the Revolutionary Nationalist movement of this island, through the National Front, can move more strongly and united into the 1980's.

Forward with the National Revolution.

Mick Lloyd,
Epsom,
Surrey.

CRUEL TRUTHS

Dear Editor,

Nick Griffin's "The Tide Has Turned" (NT No.18) lays down three internal prerequisites for successful social revolution. To them should be added an important external factor: defeat in war (including Pyrrhic victories).

The American Revolution succeeded against a Britain seriously weakened by victorious wars with France; the French Revolution overturned an ancien regime bankrupted by lost-wars with Britain and the financing of the American struggle. The Russian Revolution followed the total break-down of the Czarist war effort; the Irish succeeded against an exhausted Britain savagely mauled on the Western Front; the German National Revolution was the direct result of the 1918 collapse.

However, it is not necessary for Britain and Western Europe to be defeated, in order for social revolution to succeed. The ruling cliques you face are collaborator-puppets of the U.S. Dollar Empire. The defeat of the mongrel American-Zionist Imperium will cause the rapid collapse of the European bourgeoisie (and they know it).

For Britain and Western Europe, this requires the scuttling of the NATO-coffin, backed by a De-Gaulle style "hidden persuader". For White American social-revolutionaries, reality demands the absolute strategy of "revolutionary defeatism". Cruel truths for a cruel era.

Sincerely,

John Jewell
Toronto, Canada.

RANTINGS OF A REACTIONARY

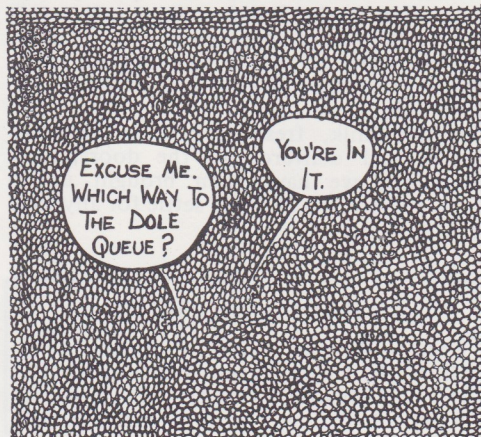

The Editor,
The Daily Torygraph.

Sir,
May I just ask if Mrs. Thatcher is related to our great wartime leader, Winston Churchill? I am sure I am not the only person to have noticed the similarities in their appearance, behaviour, and most of all in their resistance to evil. For surely the evil of Hitler is only surpassed by that of the greedy workers who are trying to wreck this country. To conclude, there is yet hope for our 'Blessed plot' while such spirit inspires our rulers.

Of course, a lot of the trouble is with the young. Look at them. Ignorant yobbo types, with skinheads or long hair with beads in it, all injecting themselves with cannabis and listening to jazz music in discos. These football hooligans remind one of the Nazi Brownshirt thugs. I bet Winston would have dealt with them. Short, sharp, shocks. As it is I wouldn't be surprised if we decent folk are murdered in our beds. I'm sure that the welfare state and school encouragement of self-abuse are at the back of it.

These dole-queue spongers are saying that we should stop foreign imports. Well, I fought against these Jappy chappies and I know Tojo. You can't blame him for working hard. As Mrs. T. has said, import controls aren't cricket. How would we make rum for a start? No, the answer is to move our factories to Japan and let the bloody Unions sort out their own mess.

I remain your grovelling Servant,
Capt. R. St. John Pinkington-Smythe.

Industrial Front

MODERATES ARE NO FRIENDS OF OURS!

MILITANT wings of the Trade Union Movement tend to be dominated by those holding Marxist doctrines whose only concern is the furtherance of their ideology and whose actions, on occasions, far from benefiting their members, are harmful and damaging. These Marxists will often call strike action at the slightest excuse just to further their immediate political goals. In the long run, of course, this greatly weakens the impact of strikes. The bosses are able to divide the workers by lowering morale generally and concentrating on the weaker workers who will break a strike call.

Many workers who are tired of being used as a political football are looking for an alternative leadership. It is important, however, for National Front Trade Unionists, be they rank and file or officials, to warn their brothers and sisters that wet moderates are no alternative to the reds. Indeed, there is strong evidence that time servers, such as Frank Chapple, are just as dangerous, if not more so, to the Labour Movement.

These 'black legs' will do almost anything 'for a quiet life' and this means that in the event of a clash with the bosses, they will make a show of standing up for their members but will eventually turn Judas and sell out the union for 'thirty pieces of silver'. Most moderate union officials seem more interested in obtaining a Knighthood and the fastest route to a seat in the House of Lords, than in bettering the conditions of their members who pay their grossly inflated wages.

An example of such a pathetically moderate union is the Electrical, Electronic, Telecommunication - Plumbing Union. The front page of the latest issue of CONTACT, the E.E.P.T.U. monthly paper, cannot conceal its delight at the thought of the Frank Chapple Mafia remaining in control for another term. A part of this victory includes a decision that the 145 full-time officials should not be open to election, by their branches, but chosen by guess who? The union kept its ban on Communists holding office, not for the reason of them being followers of an alien ideology which goes against the interests of our Nation and people, but because they are the only organised opposition to Chapple and his cronies, at present.

In the same issue of CONTACT there is an article on the code of practice adopted by the E.E.P.T.U. for "the elimination of racial discrimination and the promotion of equality of opportunity in employment". The document lays out guidelines for shop stewards to "deal with racist employers," and "try to wipe out racialism in the Trade Union Movement". Perhaps it has escaped the notice of the E.E.P.T.U. that it is in the interests of British Workers for employers to be made to discriminate in favour of organised White labour and thus cut out Black scabs who are prepared to be used as cheap labour.

Many unions are fighting hard for the eventual abolition of Youth Training Schemes, replacing YTS with apprenticeships with guaranteed jobs at the end of them and while YTS does still exist, to negotiate a decent living wage for those young people on the scheme. Meanwhile, reactionary Bill Wright, an area official for E.E.P.T.U. is undermining those other sections of the Labour Movement who are attempting to give Britain's youth a real future. He is singing the praises of Youth Training Schemes and thus giving some credence to the Tory regime's legalisation of slave labour. Doesn't Bill Wright know, or care for that matter, that many employers are sacking workers doing unskilled jobs and using YTS as a way of cutting down their wage bill.

Workers tired of being used by the lunatic left must not see this as a reason to reject militancy in favour of a moderate line. The Trade Union Movement has never got anywhere by compromising its position. The Tolpuddle Martyrs were prepared to sacrifice all to see working folk given the right to organise themselves and it must be this same spirit that motivates Trade Unionists today.

Only the National Front with our creed of Radical Nationalism and vision of a White People's State, can give the workers of Britain the leadership they urgently need if they are not to be crushed by the wheels of industry.

VOICE OF THE BRITISH WORKER?

THE Allied Union of Engineering Workers have found it necessary to start an Industrial Language Training Unit to develop their shop stewards' "skill in listening and speaking English in the context of their specific roles and duties in the company".

Why is it necessary for shop stewards to be trained in what would seem the most basic knowledge? Because the stewards on the course spoke English as a second language; Punjabi, Urdu, and Hindi being their mother tongue.

What confidence can British workers have in their Trade Unions if the shop stewards, supposed to be representing them can't even speak English!

NOT A LOTTA BOTTLE

A Statutory Order to allow sterilised and long life UHT milk, plus frozen pasteurised cream to be imported from the E.E.C. could mean the loss of over 50,000 jobs in the British Milk Industry and the end of doorstep delivery services.

Fierce opposition came from the Union of Shop, Distributive and Allied Workers; National Farmers Union; Women's Farming Union; Transport and General Workers Union; pensioner organisations; women's groups; voluntary bodies serving the sick and the house-bound; and individuals who signed the Trade Union sponsored National Petition to 'Save Your Pinta' (a quarter of a million signatures were collected in a few weeks). Despite this the order was passed, by a majority of 111, in the House of Commons.

The Government have been left in no doubt that the whole dairy industry regards lifting the ban on cheap foreign milk as a sell-out to continental producers and processors of inferior milk and perhaps the extinction of the British milkman. It would only take a very small proportion of customers to switch over to foreign milk in the shops, to make many milk rounds uneconomic.

British milk, fresh from clean modern dairies and delivered to the doorstep, is something we have been brought up to expect - we MUST NOT settle for anything less.

This series of articles by Ian Anderson describes some of the more interesting political activities of both National Front members and occasionally members of the public. While all the facts are true, the identities of some individuals have been changed for reasons that will become obvious.

Some regions of the National Front seem to think that to book up a coach for a national activity not only requires a huge amount of planning and financial resources, but also results in a boring and dull journey to and from the activity.

If we were the Women's Institute this latter accusation might be true, but fortunately NF members possess a vitality which guarantees lively journeys and a hatred for our enemies which keeps some of them in a state of terror.

In January 1982 a convoy of NF coaches set off from London for a re-direction point near to Coventry. From this point we intended to proceed to a town somewhere in the West Midlands when we heard where it was that Sinn Fein had gone for their annual 'Bloody Sunday' march.

Everyone was in excellent spirits despite having to board the coaches soon after 7.00 a.m. — the atmosphere was one of quiet anticipation. Some way along the M1 motorway the convoy pulled into a service station for a breakfast break. As the first of almost 150 of our members made their way into the upstairs cafeteria they beheld a sight which was almost as hideous as it was inviting.

KARATE TERROR

There sat in the corner was Fran Eden, chief media idol of the Revolutionary Communist Party, together with her selection of refugees from the Third World. These ethnic comrades have frequently claimed to be able to strike terror into the hearts of their opponents by their mastery of the art of karate. However, far from leaping from their places and preparing to rout the forces of nationalism with shattering karate kicks and acrobatic kung fu kicks, these comrades seemed more intent on reading their copies of the "The Next Step" and trying not to be noticed.

Fortunately most of our members are good humoured and, unlike the average commie, are not keen on taking advantage of such a massive preponderance of numbers to massacre the opposition. Indeed one of our members felt so sorry for the rather bedraggled group of 9 or 10 "International Revolutionaries" that he even offered Fran a cup of tea. It was indeed unfortunate that just as he was about to hand it to her he should trip on the carpet causing the tea and sugar to land on her so butch hair style.

An unfortunate series of similar accidents took place before it was decided that the time had come to resume our journey northwards. As we were leaving the Service Station we were much puzzled as to how Fran Eden and her motley crew intended to travel further to support the IRA in a minibus which appeared to have four flat tyres and neither windscreen wipers nor wing mirrors. Much perplexed we continued our journey.

The re-direction point near to Coventry was fortunately very close to a roadside pub into which most people piled while waiting to hear where the Sinn Fein bastards were marching. After about 30 minutes the news that they were marching in Birmingham came through. We embarked on the coaches and set off.

ROAD BLOCK

As the now extended convoy of coaches and minibuses approached a large roundabout on the route into Birmingham a police road-block had been set up and we were denied access into the main road into Birmingham. A large number of people got out of their various vehicles to find out what was going on and this caused a considerable traffic jam to develop.

Being public spirited a few members went back along the queue of cars which had built up behind us to explain to drivers about the road block. On approaching the driver of one minibus it was noticed that the occupants all seemed to be wearing green badges with pro-IRA symbols on them and there seemed to be some form of red banner on the floor.

On realising that this minibus was full of supporters of the IRA murderers our member loudly voiced his disgust. At this a number of individuals whom we can only assume were members of the public got out of their cars and became extremely angry with the occupants of the minibus.

Members of the National Front's Drum Corps prepare for a march after a lively coach journey.

Tempers became so enraged that after a few minutes the minibus was forced to limp off across the grass verge with thick red smoke billowing out of the various broken windows. For once a group of IRA supporters were on the receiving end of the genuine anger of the British people.

After this little incident the convoy of coaches resumed its journey via the back streets to Birmingham where a successful march was held. However as you can see there is no reason why coach journeys should be boring, sometimes they do, of course, pass off without incident, however in my experience they are more often enjoyable and exciting and after a good march there is nothing so pleasant as to journey home in a full coach singing the songs of nationalism which have been passed from one generation of nationalist to the next.

Are the Arabs REALLY Communist?

CONSERVATIVES will go to any lengths to pamper, praise and protect the bandit-state of Israel. Having done their best to hide and/or ignore the facts linking Jewry with Communism, these hypocritical Tory reactionaries devote themselves solely to the greater glory of Israel and international Zionism.

The main thrust of the Tory 'Israel uber alles' policy is always a "Hate the Arabs" campaign.

The typical Arab, we are told, is a dirty, ignorant, fanatical barbarian who simply cannot resist the urge to hijack airliners and machine-gun innocent little Israeli school-children.

But the most hypocritical lie of all is that the Arabs are incurably addicted to Communism!

Preying upon the British people's hostility towards Communism, the Tories proclaim that the Arab countries are swarming with Russian and Chinese Reds, that the Arab economies are 'socialist' and anti-capitalist (how awful!), and that the Arab guerrilla movement is nothing but a Middle Eastern version of the IRA.

The standard 'proof' trotted out by the Tories to prop-up their myth is the old line that because the Arabs have accepted military aid from the Soviet Union, they must be Communists!

OPPORTUNISTIC DESIRE

Are the Tories really incapable of understanding that the Arabs are forced to accept weapons from the USSR because the Zionist-dominated Western nations won't send them as much as a pea-shooter? And that the Soviets are motivated only by an opportunistic desire to increase their influence in the Middle East by taking advantage of the Arabs?

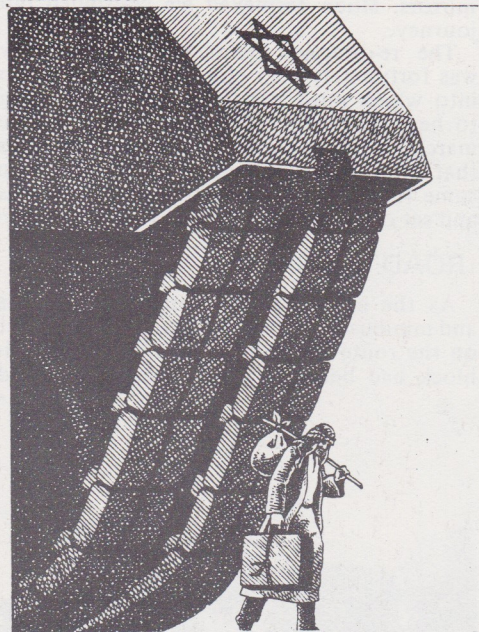

Or do the reactionaries really know what is going on, but keep 'mum' in fear of upsetting Mrs Thatcher's majority in Finchley? ... (is this also why Thatcher refuses to meet Arab League delegations?)

Either way, the Tories are either stupid or they're lying.

It's hard to believe that even the reactionary mentality of the 'right' is unable to analyse the current Middle Eastern situation. But would the Tories tell lies?

Maybe the former is the case: maybe the Tories have been so busy singing the praises of Menachem Begin that they haven't been doing their homework, and are unaware of the actual status of the communists in the Middle East.

If this is the case perhaps they would like to consider the following:

- * In the summer of 1970 Syrian authorities threw 400 Marxists into jail, while in neighbouring Iraq 200 Reds were jailed.

- * With a Communist revolution threatening to topple the Sudanese government in July, 1971, Egypt and Libya airlifted thousands of troops into the Sudan and helped crush the Red revolt.

- * The Palestine Liberation Army, one of the largest Arab guerrilla groups, ordered in the summer of 1971, that its ranks be purged of all Communists and sympathizers.

- * During the summer months of 1972 the Egyptians kicked out 20,000 Soviet advisers from the country.

- * In April, 1973, the Libyan leader Colonel

Gaddafi ordered all Jewish and Communist books to be gathered up and burned.

- * A few weeks before the October War the Syrians put severe restrictions on the movements of all Soviet advisers after Soviet technicians manning SAM missile sites refused to open fire on raiding Israeli jets.

- * To date, most of the Arab states have outlawed the Communist party.

Even Thatcher would have a tough time talking her way around these facts to convince us of how Red the Arabs are. In reality, of course, the Arabs are militantly nationalistic, fiercely proud of their cultural heritage, and as a consequence, resolutely anti-Communist.

Many Arab leaders do indeed refer to their states' socio-economic systems as 'socialist' because they believe that the interests of their people and nation should come first, ahead of the selfish desires of moneyed cliques; and also because they have refused to open up their countries to the madness of Western commercialism — a situation that has greatly irritated 'British' capitalists and jingoists, and, no doubt, the professional journalists and politicians in their pay.

Arab socialism stems not from Marxism but from Islam, and is dedicated to the liberation of Palestine, and to the complete eradication of Zionism — currently festering on Palestinian soil.

So, it is hardly surprising that world Jewry, along with its agents, dupes and capitalist allies, is carrying out a super-smear attack against the Arabs. Anti-Arab propaganda in the UK is just another example of the old Jewish trick of portraying our friends as our enemies and our enemies as our friends.

No! Karl Marx is not alive and well and living in Cairo — nor in Tripoli, Damascus and Riyadh. But considering that the Land of the Kibbutz is blessed with two Communist parties, there's a good chance he may be found having a good time with his racial brothers and sisters in Tel Aviv!

thousands of lakes and rivers are no longer able to support plants and fish. Air pollution from the giant industrial centres of the Great Lakes is the biggest thorn in current Canadian-US relations. The American National Commission on Air Quality admits that the US exports four times as much pollution to Canada as it imports from it.

Although half of Canada's acid rain comes from US power plants, the world's biggest source of sulphur dioxide pollution is, ironically, Canadian. The nickel and copper smelting plant at Sudbury, Ontario pours out more than a million tonnes of sulphur dioxide into the atmosphere each year. This sulphur dioxide is, in turn, falling back to earth as sulphuric acid in rain water.

But it is in Germany that people are beginning to realise the full implications of rain pollution. Professor Peter Schuett reminded us that the forests are essential for replacing oxygen into the atmosphere. If the forests are killed by acid rain, then there must be a drop-back in the amount of oxygen replaced. "We are on the point of destroying the basis of our life" he said.

Meanwhile, a German conservationist group preferred to recite the wisdom of an old German proverb: "First the forests die, then man"

AS A POST-SCRIPT to the main thrust of this article, it is worth noting a recent development which epitomises the attitude of the Tory Government to the problem of acid rain pollution in this country.

On January 17th, just two weeks after the publication of the report on acid rain in Footloose magazine, the Government announced that it was granting millions of pounds in aid for a forestry scheme which involves the continuous planting and harvesting of trees over 75,000 acres of land. At first sight it would appear that this Government aid should be applauded since it would help to replace trees which have been killed by acid rain. There is one snag, however, the Government aid is going to India and the trees are to be planted in the Indian state of Karnataka.

The amount which the Tories have granted to India is £25 million! Exactly the same amount which it is estimated British agriculture is losing each year thanks to acid rain pollution!

CAPITALISM—The Last

ANYONE who drove through the English countryside at the end of last summer will have seen the devastation wrought by the burning of millions of tons of "unwanted" straw. Hedgerows, trees, wildlife and even other people's unharvested crops were all damaged in thousands of separate incidents. Whole counties in lowland England were polluted for several weeks on end by a pall of black smoke.

Farmers here have been taught by the Ministry of Agriculture that burning is the only way to get rid of the straw efficiently and that the ash is good for the soil. In fact, the value of the minerals left by burning is very low, and there are a number of alternatives to burning and the accompanying devastation and pollution.

While farmers in the Home Counties burn huge amounts of straw as "unwanted", dairy farmers in the West Country and the upland areas of Britain have to pay outrageously high prices for winter fodder and bedding for their animals. Costs of up to £100 a tonne help to push up the price of meat and milk. Some small-holders and hill-farmers have in addition to pay so much for the delivery of small loads of straw that they simply cannot afford it.

The worst aspect of the straw-burning problem is that it is unnecessary. Much of it could be used by livestock farmers, but there are also many other uses. Although straw has only half the energy value of coal, there are a number of types of reliable straw-fired boilers, which can provide cheap heat for farmhouses, grain drying and greenhouses.

OVER one-third of Britain's ancient woodlands have been destroyed since 1945. Areas of outstanding natural beauty and of great historical importance have fallen to the bulldozer and chainsaw in the search for quick profits and "economic efficiency".

Worst hit county is Northamptonshire, which has lost 63% of its woodland since the 1930's, but others have fared little better. Shropshire has lost 62.9%, Lincolnshire 53.4%, Cornwall 46% and Northumberland 45%.

It is estimated that more woodland was lost between 1945 and 1975 than in the previous 400 years. Even worse is that the
